Heading north, away from the village's central square, one comes across the church of St. Nicolas, which is a small, simple building.

This church can be architecturally characterized as a registered size of a temple, which is a small, simple building.

However, the artistic manner of its buildup cannot be analyzed further, due to the coating on the walls.

The one and only part of the wall's paint which has been removed, clearly points to the assumption

Noteworthy is the fact that ~~the wall was already in the year 1629~~ underwent renovations in the year 1629, stating that this house of God

The exact location of the Map Holy Church can be tracked in the section:□
